Account of Incident:

Armando Pace was shot repeatedly as he was driving home on a motorcycle at around 1 p.m. on July 18, 2006.

Senior Inspector Cesar Cabuhat, the city police chief, said Pace was hit in the back of the head and chest and was declared dead on the spot.

Police quoted witnesses as saying the assailants, who were tailing Pace after he left the radio station, drove alongside his motorcycle and fired at him on a main road in full view of many people.

The two men escaped and no one has claimed responsibility for the attack.

Police and media organizations said the killing could be a result of Pace's hard-hitting commentaries.

Colleagues said Pace had often criticized alleged corruption and illegal activities of local politicians and government officials in his radio program.

Three hours after the shooting, police acted on a tip from a witness and arrested Jesus Saraum, a resident of Mabini del Rosario Street, Digos City.

Recovered from the suspect was a blue XRM motorcycle, which he allegedly used at the time of the incident.

According to police, the witness had attested that the suspect was wearing a dirty white jacket when the shooting took place.

Saraum was wearing a dirty white jacket when he was arrested. There were also bloodstains found in the motorcycle, prompting Scene of the Crime Operatives to get blood sample from Pace for matching purposes.
